This map comes from a collection of books published by the 'Colonial Office' for use by civil servants at that time. They were published yearly from the 1870s to the 1930s and included such things as the names of the local magistrates and other officers, the principle businesses, imports and exports etc for each colonial country – all information thought to be of interest for government departments at that time.

They were small sized books and the maps were folded within them. They are printed on rather delicate paper as they were never intended to become antiques! Some have some general paper aging to their edges, but we have found that they do frame up exceptionally well.
